TECHNOLOGY FIRM SAVES THE DAY FOR NATIONAL HEALTHCARE PROJECT

Chicago, IL, May 16, 2007 – When Frank Noone of McKesson Health Services signed up with MXOtech, Inc. for a partnership project with a high profile healthcare client, he expected top-notch technology services. What he didn't anticipate were the problem solving abilities, out-of-the-box skills, flexibility, patience and business ethics adhered to by the staff at MXOtech, allowing his organization to successfully pursue quality healthcare management for all patients.

"The result of our efforts [together with MXOtech] is that, as a team, we've been able to complete this project that often seemed like an unattainable and distant goal," says Noone.

MXOtech partnered with McKesson to collect claim and encounter data into a single data mart from medical groups in order to convert their claims processing from paper to a much more efficient, electronic format. Because the internal staff was overwhelmed with the amount of information and the process it would take to complete the conversions, MXOtech was able to step in and save the organization time and money, while improving accuracy, for the large amount of data that needed to be processed.

But it isn't just large businesses that are reaping the benefits; even companies on a small scale recognize the value of adding MXOtech to their team. Jason Tenenbaum, Ph.D. and CEO of Solomon's Gourmet Cookies of Chicago declares, "When we moved to our new location from our original 1200 square foot facility, we needed a complete server system, six workstations, a point of sale system, and wireless capabilities set up. MXOtech helped us seamlessly install everything and transfer over all of our data to the new system. They've since been essential in maintaining our system so that we can conduct our business safely and securely."

Even businesses that want to ensure the security and stability of their existing network can do so by enrolling in a maintenance contract. Julie Murphy Casserly, President of JMC Wealth Management in Chicago, states, "In my industry, we can't afford downtime when it comes to our technology. We enrolled in MXOtech's maintenance program, and they come in a few hours a week to head off any problems before they happen. Since implementing the program, we have never had any issues with our system. This makes us proactive instead of reactive – saving us time, money and frustration. Plus, I can always count on the team at MXOtech to respond quickly and efficiently whenever I need them."

MXOtech, Inc. – a Chicago based technology firm – is increasing the value of technology investments for startup and large businesses by providing more than just technical expertise, but also solutions that maximize investment, time and resources for the modern business environment. As a technology staffing, consulting, and networking services firm, MXOtech offers businesses of all sizes a full range of I.T. services. With its focus on advancing technology through close working relationships, MXOtech has quickly established a distinguishable advantage throughout the business marketplace.
